

Alliances

established through an alliance of sovereign nations. Brazil, India, China, and other nations must play a key role in this new configuration, she urged.

In Sao Paulo, at a seminar organized by the Institute for Freedom and Economic and Social Development, Mrs. LaRouche was greeted by the Institute president Dr. Jose Carlos Graca Wagner with praise for her contributions, as well as those of her husband. She then participated in a forum sponsored by the city council of Sao Paulo to honor Dr. Eneas Carneiro, presidential candidate of the Party of National Reconstruction (PRONA), who was being made an Honorary Citizen of the city. Mrs. LaRouche, who was introduced by Dr. Carneiro, addressed 350 people at this solemn ceremony. In her speech, she stressed the need to generate a cultural renaissance as the sine qua non of the survival of nations: "We must establish the goal that every child in the world, each in the image of God, receive a Classical education. Only in this way can we guarantee the permanent eradication of the oligarchic system."

formed entirely by children engaged in music studies: the Schola Cantorum, the National Music School's Children's Choir, students of the Violin School of Maestro Yuriko Kuronuma, and other instrumentalists.

At the concert's end, Mendoza told the audience, that the primary obstacle to restoring Classical music education is I.M.F. policies, and, therefore, that the Schiller Institute and Schola Cantorum plan to organize a concert for a just, new world economic order. He called on the audience to join in singing "Va, Pensiero," the chorus of the Hebrew slaves from Verdi's opera Nabucco—famous as the Italian hymn of liberation from foreign occupation. The audience burst into song.

European Conference

Continued

were flooded with credit aimed, not at infrastructure development, but at trapping nations in a vicious circle of ever-increasing indebtedness.

As the result of the same policies, the U.S. physical economy began to contract. Since 1971, there has been no economic growth in the United States, LaRouche told the audience. The degree of collapse, he explained, has been covered over by the fact, that there has been no investment in merely replenishing dilapidated infrastructure.

The total debt worldwide is now several orders of magnitude larger than the value of all the goods and services produced globally. This means that the world economy, as a whole, is bankrupt.

LaRouche emphasized that it is not too late to avert disaster for the West. He cited the World War II mobilization of America's dormant industrial might, under the leadership of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, to defeat the Nazis. FDR's efforts produced the greatest industrial expansion in history. Those same methods, LaRouche insisted, can and must be used today.

Schiller and the Liberation Wars

In a second keynote address, Helga Zepp LaRouche presented a detailed history of Friedrich Schiller and the German Liberation Wars, showing that the present period of grave global crisis is, in many respects, parallel to that period, when all European republicans engaged in a war to destroy Napoleon's drive to reconstitute a European imperium. Lazare Carnot, the French "author of victory," joined forces with German republicans, such as the Humboldt brothers, vom Stein, Scharnhorst, and others, to defeat Napoleon, and lay the foundations for an American-style revolution on continental Europe.

Earlier, the Jacobins had quashed the prospects of an American revolution in France, but the spirit of the American events of 1776, and the direct ties to leading American figures, gave rise to the European effort.

Today, as well, Mrs. LaRouche emphasized, republican forces worldwide must join forces to defeat a financial oligarchy, hell-bent on creating a new Dark Age of death and destruction.

Other panels included a series of presentations detailing Carnot's role as one of Europe's leading military strategists, scientists, and republican leaders; and a panel, chaired by Lyndon LaRouche, presenting the implications of the attempted circumnavigation of the world undertaken by associates of the great Greek mathematician Eratosthenes, who proved the Earth was spherical, and accurately calculated its circumference. According to groundbreaking archeological investigations, Eratosthenes' students succeeded in sailing from the Mediterranean to the South Pacific via the Red Sea and Indian Ocean, and, eventually, to the Pacific coast of South America, in 231 B.C. LaRouche pointed to the fact that the next successful voyage to the Americas was in 1492 A.D., more than 1,700 years later, to demonstrate that great achievements are made when individuals fight for great ideas, and that human progress is not a linear process, but can be set back by regression into oligarchical forms of society, when crises in civilization—such as those facing us now—are not surmounted.

On the Back Cover (clockwise from top left): Johann Sebastian Bach; Leopold Mozart, with his children Wolfgang and "Nannerl," in Paris, 1764; Mozart plays the score of his opera Don Giovanni, Vienna, 1787; W.A. Mozart at the keyboard; Johannes Brahms, 1893; Brahms at the piano; Ludwig van Beethoven, 1815; Beethoven at the piano, while W.A. Mozart looks on, Vienna, 1787; Beethoven, the "Promethean," 1819-20; J.S. Bach at the organ. Background scores: Autograph ms., J.S. Bach, St. Matthew Passion, 1736 revision; autograph ms., W.A. Mozart, Requiem, 1791; autograph sketches, Ludwig van Beethoven, Fifth Symphony in C minor, Op. 67. Credits: Brahms at the piano, Corbis-Bettmann; all others, The Granger Collection, New York.