

LaRouche Hosts EIR Video

‘Storm Over Asia’: U.S. Needs New Foreign Policy

On November 27, Executive Intelligence Review magazine announced the release of “Storm Over Asia,” a vital policy report by Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr. The two-and-a-half-hour video explores, in depth, the current drift into a new global conflagration, and proposes a new American foreign policy—based on the best traditions of our Founding Fathers—to reverse that otherwise inevitable course towards war and economic ruin.

LaRouche reviews the ongoing crises in the Caucasus region along the southern tier of Russia; in the Indian subcontinent; in Africa; and in Ibero-America; exposing the hideous incompetence—and worse—of the U.S. State Department under Madeleine Albright, and the outright geopolitical treachery of the Blair government in Britain. He develops the relationship between the ongoing collapse of the world financial and monetary system and the impulse towards regional, and eventually global, confrontation, drawing on the experiences of the two world wars of the Twentieth century.

moting what President Ronald Reagan labelled the Strategic Defense Initiative. The videotape describes how LaRouche came to the conclusion, by the autumn of 1988, that the Soviet empire was about to collapse, and that the prospects for German reunification were immediately on the table. Instead of adopting LaRouche’s proposals for a “Marshall Plan”- and “Food for Peace”-approach towards the nations of the collapsing Soviet bloc, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, U.S. President George Bush, and French President François Mitterrand adopted an anti-German, anti-Russian geopolitical agenda, which led to the collapse of German industrial potential and the wholesale looting of Russia. This folly has led us to the brink of a new strategic confrontation.

To set the proper framework for understanding the current policy crisis and its appropriate solutions, LaRouche reviews the issues that shaped the American Revolution and the development of the idea of a “community of principle” among perfectly sovereign nation-states—the basis for John Quincy Adams’ development of American foreign policy. Later, LaRouche delves into the founding principles of Western civilization, dating back to the period of Classical Greece and then to the early Fathers of the Church, tracing that tradition through the European Renaissance, and into the founding of the colonies in North America.

“Storm Over Asia” is available from Executive Intelligence Review magazine for $50.00 plus shipping and handling.

Sergei Glazyev’s Genocide Released in English

Russia in the 1990’s: “The rate of annual population loss has been more than double the rate of loss during the period of Stalinist repression and mass famine in the first half of the 1930’s. . . . There has been nothing like this in the thousand-year history of Russia.”
—Sergei Glazyev

Dr. Sergei Glazyev’s Genocide, released by Executive Intelligence Review in December, analyzes the catastrophic decline of the Russian economy and the deformation of society from August 1991 through August 17, 1998, from the author’s unique vantage-point as a member of the government, Deputy of the State Duma, and then economist at the Security Council and the Federation Council staff. In documenting the devastation of Russian industry and living standards, Sergei Glazyev’s account makes intelligible the anger of many Russian patriots at Western leaders who still preach staying the destructive course that was packaged as “free trade and democracy.”

Doctor of Economic Sciences at age 29, specialist in “the theory of long-term technological development” and graduate of the prestigious Central Mathematical Economics

Institute (CEMI) of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, Sergei Glazyev was one of the economists destined for a post as a “young reformer” in post-Soviet Russia. He became Minister of Foreign Economic Relations in independent Russia’s first cabinet under President Boris Yeltsin, and was the only member of the government to resign in protest of Yeltsin’s abolition of the Parliament and the Constitution in 1993.

Dr. Glazyev went on to win election to the State Duma in December
